A whole house. A fresh start.

This older Manchester property needed attention throughout. The renovation reached its kitchens, bathrooms, bedrooms and shared spaces. Tall windows, dark timber trim and exposed brick remain part of its character.

The brick still leads.

Exposed brick remains in view beside updated fixtures, lighting and a wood-look floor. A new finish, with the building's character still part of the room.

Deep window surrounds stay prominent against lighter walls and new flooring. The room's existing features still set its proportions.

Room for the light to move.

Tall windows, dark trim and sunlight remain the center of the room.

The finish carries from room to room.

The arched-window room and the bedroom with a recessed closet share the same lighter palette and continuous floor finish.

The welcome starts here.

The spaces between rooms matter, too.

A patterned runner, dark wood and globe lighting give the shared entry a warmer finish. The renovation reached the welcome as well as the main rooms.

The work you see. The care behind it.
